Introduction:

The growing necessity for corporations to build Sustainability into their business operations demands individual and collective commitments to its core philosophy. Numerous Human, Social, Economic and Environmental parameters come together to bring about changes that are long term, impactful and in turn sustainable. Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) has been in prevalence in India for over a decade and it has seamlessly started to integrate with Environment, Social, Governance (ESG) and Sustainability. CSR and ESG are two approach to sustainable development, but they differ in how they are used and what they measure. CSR is driven largely by considerations and commitments internal to a corporation, and ESG is driven by external requirements, such as international frameworks and standards. However, they complement each other in conversations on Sustainability.

Objective:

The two-day workshop will discuss the Fundamentals of CSR, ESG and Sustainability as the participants explore their potential confluence. The workshop would particularly benefit the Academicians and Industry Professionals who wish to understand the basics and equip themselves with relevant insights of the Business contexts today. The workshop comprises of hands-on elements which are designed to enable the participants engage with the themes effectively.
